

Belvo founders' bios

Pablo Viguera

Pablo is an internet entrepreneur, now focusing on fintech. He has been COO at Verse, one of the leading P2P payments apps in Europe and General Manager (Spain) at Revolut, one of the fastest-growing fintech startups globally.

Before that Pablo founded various startups, one of which with Rocket Internet in South East Asia. Prior to starting his entrepreneurial career, Pablo was an investment banker with Merrill Lynch, in London, focusing on M&A in the internet sector.

Pablo holds an MBA from the University of Chicago Booth School of Business and a BSc in Business Administration from Universidad Pontificia Comillas and The Wharton School (University of Pennsylvania). An avid traveler, Pablo has been to over 75 countries and spent 8 months backpacking around the world back in 2011.

Oriol Tintoré

Oriol started his career as an Aerospace Engineer at NASA, developing small satellites. He worked at NASA Ames Research Center between 2011-2015.

In 2015, he enrolled at Stanford University to pursue an MBA with the support of a full-tuition scholarship from Obra Social of La Caixa (Spanish Non-profit). While at Stanford, Oriol founded Capella Space (and acted as its first CFO), a startup specialized in collecting information from the space that has obtained the financial backing of VCs such as Spark Capital and has raised more than $50m.

Upon graduation from Stanford he worked for some months in Business Development at Flex (www.flex.com) in the Bay Area until he joined Verse, one of the leading P2P payments apps in Europe, as CEO.